[ORIGINAL] Parrot Sings Let the Bodies Hit t...

AWESOME.

Oh man, I want a parrot.

I swear god, I knew that parrot when I was a kid. There was a yellow-naped African Green who was the mascot of the parrot store my mom used to go to. She was also named Lolita.

I wish there was a clip of this bird saying her name--I'd know for sure.

The video description says she's only six years old. OTOH, the channel has more parrot songs and the parrot talking.

It sounded like Smeagol singing...

That's beyond amazing. I love that song, and I love it more now that it's sung by a parrot.

Dear Stompy-Band Singers:

If you enunciate, parrots will learn your songs. This will mark you as eternally cool.

Love,

Animal Planet

The parrot will always scream better than you do.

Someone get that parrot some Disturbed, pronto!

I've always found it kind of funny that Disturbed specifically touts their lead singer's enunciation on the band's website (or least they used to - I haven't looked in a while). It's just so not what you expect from that kind of band. On the other hand, they aren't wrong.

That beats the hell out of "I Left My Heart in San Francisco", which my grandpa's African Grey parrot used to sing (well, the first stanza, anyway). Yay for mimicry!
